"I TAWT I TAW A PUDDY TAT!"

One of the most recognizable and beloved of all the Looney Tunes characters is that blue-eyed ball of innocence, Tweety. Tweety made his debut in 1942 in "A Tale of Two Kitties" directed by Bob Clampett. Five years later Tweety made his first appearance with his cohort in comedy, Sylvester the cat, in a Freleng-directed short, "Tweetie Pie", which went on to win an Academy Award. Since that time, Tweety and Sylvester have appeared in more than 400 theatrical animated short films.

One of the all-time great comedy teams, Tweety and Sylvester have the chemistry needed to delight audiences of all ages. Tweety's wide-eyed innocence and child-like demeanor is in sharp contrast to Sylvester's alley cat cunning and persistence. But Tweety is nobody's fool, particularly not Sylvester's, and always manages to turn the tables on the devious and determined feline.

Part of Tweety's ageless charm is his mischief-making sense of humor. The reactions of this poor helpless little bird against the big bad cat reveal that a true rascal's heart beats beneath those soft yellow feathers.

As a primary character, Tweety is attractive to boys and girls under two years of age but his innocence, vulnerability and sweetness make him a particular favorite of females, from young girls to adult women.
